ABSTRACT

The number of crimes in human life is still haunting, one of which is the crime of theft in the Archipelago Region, which is still rampant, even today the mass media coverage, both print and electronic. For example, the incident in the Sayung Sector Police Legal Area was experienced by residents of Purwosari Village, Syaung District as Victims of Motorcycle Theft, for the author in this case the intention was to find out how the process of carrying out the investigation and detention of the criminal act of theft in the Covid-19 Pandemic Period and the obstacles and solutions faced in the process of carrying out detention in the investigation of the crime of theft in the Covid-19 Pandemic Period.

The research method uses a sociological juridical approach. Sources of data obtained from several stages, namely through field research (interviews) and library research, systematic data analysis includes data reduction, data presentation and drawing conclusions.

Based on the results of the study, it is hoped that conclusions can be drawn regarding the investigation of the criminal act of theft during the Covid-19 Pandemic, not far from the process of carrying out investigations of other general criminal cases, but there is an addition while still adhering to health protocols. This can be seen from the stages of the investigation process, namely starting from summoning witnesses or reported parties, Examination, if during examination the investigator finds at least 2 (two) pieces of evidence, the investigator can raise the status of the reported party to a suspect and make arrests, all of which do not escape the health protocol including ; check body temperature using a Thermogun, wash hands, use hand sanitizer, and wear a mask. Meanwhile, several factors hinder the process of carrying out detention in the investigation of the crime of theft during the Covid-19 Pandemic, namely the investigation time is too short, the suspect's poor health condition often hinders the examination process, and the whereabouts of the suspect are unknown or hidden so that investigators have difficulty in the arrest process to inspection purposes. The solution in overcoming obstacles is that investigators work professionally, quickly and responsively, provide special education to investigators and cooperate with relevant agencies to speed up the investigation process.
